The Broighter Gold

Nestled amidst the yellow fields of oilseed rape is Broglasco Farm, home of Broighter Gold Rapeseed Oil.

Behind every bottle is a wealth of history; and Richard and Leona Kane have now unearthed their own piece of history inspired by the Broighter Hoard - a collection of gold artefacts from the Iron Age of the 1st Century BC discovered in their fields in 1896.

Broighter Gold Rapeseed Oil is grown on the land where the gold hoard was uncovered.

The hoard included a gold boat, gold torc, a bowl and other jewellery. Leona's favourite piece from the collection is the gold torc, this inspired the Broighter Gold Rapeseed Oil logo.

History

The Kane Family has been working the land since 1853. Richard is the 6th generation farmer to farm the land at Broglasco.

In 2009, Richard and Leona were renovating their farmhouse and in the kitchen Leona discovered she had no olive oil. Richard brought some of the cold pressed rapeseed oil in an empty bottle for Leona to use to cook the two steaks.

She immediately noticed the different smell to olive oil. They didn’t burn and cooked perfectly. This planted the seed and they set about developing their Liquid Gold!

In 2011, Richard and Leona started selling their single variety seed product. The Broighter Gold Rapeseed Oil range now consists of nine flavours including a gift range.

They now supply a shops, delis, restaurants and hotels with their products including developing own brand products for high-end hotels and hamper companies.

Leona and Broighter Gold have won numerous awards and are continually innovating and moving with the trends.

Health Benefits...
