What does ‘artisan’ mean?

Artisan - Definition of artisan in English:
Noun; A worker in a skilled trade, especially one that involves making things by hand
Origin; Mid 16th century: from French, from Italian artigiano, based on Latin artitus, past participle of artire’instruct in the arts’, from ars, art- ‘art’.

Artisanal adjective

1. Pertaining to or noting a person skilled in an applied art:
2. Pertaining to or noting a high-quality or distinctive product made in small quantities, usually by hand or using traditional methods.
   • Made by a skilled person
   • an ‘applied art’, which means any art that applies aesthetic principles to the design or decoration of useful objects, such as industrial design, bookmaking, illustration, printmaking, and commercial art
   • ‘high-quality’ means just that - of a superior quality than mass produced items
   • distinctive product which is ‘unique’
   • small quantities = the more limited the batch, the more unique it is
   • ‘by hand’ means that it was not mass produced. It was created via labour of love by a skilled person.
   • traditional methods mean there have ‘ties to the past’, before technology, before scaled industries, before megabrands started enslaving the Third World.

Why do we value artisans?

A truly artisanal movement—based in craft, community, tradition, and innovation—is alive and kicking. For these businesses, growth is not something to take lightly; it’s a delicate dance between staying true to one’s values while adapting to new economies of scale.
Beyond a dedication to their craft, the following areas are important to artisans
• Commitment to local farms and community.
• Flexibility and creativity.
• Transparency and education.
• Hands-on quality control.
• Employee health and respect.
• Innovation in moderation.
• Passing on their craft.
Collaboration, Not Competition

There’s a spirit of ‘the more the merrier, and we encourage and promote collaboration within our markets. We have watched the businesses work together, combining their unique skills to create more unique produce, adding value and opening more doors. It has been a great success, and it’s always wonderful to see our members and traders work together – opening doors, finding opportunities, developing and working together.

So, What is ‘Artisan’?

Our Traders are ‘Artisans’

Without our traders to showcase we wouldn’t have a market, and we are exceptionally proud of the standard of traders we work with who deliver the very finest mouth watering foods, unusual, quirky, intricate crafts, and exquisite design led art that has been produced in the local area.

Our traders are some of the most knowledgeable, friendly people, all eager to share their stories and never happier than when they are talking about what they have made. They themselves are the producers – people who grow, make, create, style, rear, craft or bake the products that they sell.

As a result, our markets have become a vast repository of culinary knowledge, artisan craftsmanship and skills from previous generations. It’s a place to explore, to ask questions, to discover new flavours, stumble upon raw talent, unearth entrepreneurship, nurture bygone mastery, and to savour a unique, buzzing atmosphere.

Market Benefits

We have built a successful schedule of well managed and attended annual markets built initially through volunteer effort and through partnership approaches in the community which has increased the employment levels in the area and helped new businesses start up. This has developed into success of high quality, professionally managed markets which contributes to the development of the local economy, towns, events, community cohesion, and also promotes health and well-being ensuring that our events contribute to the ‘life’ of the community. Other benefits include:

- Encouraging Community Cohesion
- Encouraging social interaction between rural and urban communities
- Complementing rather than competing with high street retailers
- Economic development
- Supporting Tourism
- Reinvigorate heritage/culture

Market Benefits to Traders

- Markets cut out the middleman allowing increased financial returns through direct selling, price control, and a regular cash flow.
- They provide the trader with direct customer feedback on produce and prices.

- Regular trading allows traders to develop their business skills while earning an income, increasing the likelihood that their business will grow and develop.
• With the increase in market numbers throughout the country it is possible for individual traders to attend a substantial number of different markets.
• Offers a platform to launch new products and develop existing products using direct customer feedback
• Increase brand/brand awareness
• Provision of a support network and increase collaboration opportunities between traders

Conor Edgell
Since graduating from Belfast School of Art in 2010, Conor’s work has been part of numerous exhibitions and art collections, both public and private. He now spends his time making two sets of photographic work ‘Coordinates’ and ‘Liquid Mountains’. The prints from the ‘Coordinates’ series are captured along the North Coast, usually around lesser-seen views of that coastline. Each image is labelled with corresponding longitude and latitude to encourage people to put this into their Google maps and explore the area. ‘Liquid Mountains’ is a project inspired by learning about printmaking and in particular the work of Katsushika Hokusai and his image ‘The Great Wave’. All of his work is editioned so each print is one of a very limited number.

Seafood Handmade Confectionery is a small artisan producer of handmade hard sweets which use only natural ingredients. You won’t find any information on their label about artificial additives because SeaSugar doesn’t use any; instead they use only the best natural flavourings and colours so that the sweets are bursting with the fresh taste of natural flavours with no bitter after taste. Seasugar sweets are made using a traditional recipe and method, however there is nothing traditional about the varieties available. With so many wonderful natural extracts available, SeaSugar has become known for quirky and unusual flavour combinations which are not usually found in hard sweets.
